Oh my God I love this game so much! Yes it's short, but it's also priced accordingly.. A quite enjoyable experience! Parser is great, puzzles were solvable with thought, and graphically it felt right.. I never played parser games back in the day so I went in this without nostalgia goggles. Despite this, Snail Trek won me over with it's charm and how painless the parser system was. I've heard a lot of bad things about old text adventures and this game thankfully avoids them. It's short but that time is enjoyable not frustrating.. I'm going to review the series as a whole here. After all, you're either going to buy the bundle, or buy the first episode, and then you'll be able to make your own mind whether to keep buying the subsequent episodes. I really enjoyed my time with these games! Phil has really nailed, not only the aesthetic of early Sierra adventures, but the sort of humor and style of them too. On top of that, they use the text parser interface of the oldest graphical adventure games. That was rather ambitious back then, but with the modern conveniences of autocomplete AND autocorrect, it really works great.. Brilliant. Just the name of the game itself is almost worth a thumbs up, but it turns out to be a nice little Sierra style game. So far I have just played the free chapter. A lot of silly humour and tons of references to movies, games, and french cuisine to name a few. Most importantly it actually manages to make you feel half intelligent, like this type of games should. "Aha! I need something green and squishy. Let me try with my collection boogers in my inventory!" I really hope it continues like this in the next chapters.. Well I've now played 1 through 3, they are all excellent. It really harkens back to the era of Leisure Suit Larry, Space Quest and the bunch. No moon logic here, all very rational and logical and funny. This was the shortest of the 3 so far, took me exactly 30 minutes from start to finish. Considering the entire 4 part series will only run you $4, and it would take you about 2 1/2 hours to complete I'd say it's worth it. I find it to be quite fun.
